Learning Outcome 1: Students demonstrate understanding of diverse ideas, languages, products, or processes of humanistic inquiry or artistic expression.	Currently, the Department of History employs a program assessment that covers both the teaching and non-teaching options of the Social Science Major. This may continue, as described in the program alignment proposal for the teaching option. However, the department may explore the use of the university-wide REAL assessment program to assess learning outcomes for the Social Science Major Non-Teaching Option.
Learning Outcome 2: Students critically evaluate, synthesize, or create forms of human expression or inquiry.	Currently, the Department of History employs a program assessment that covers both the teaching and non-teaching options of the Social Science Major. This may continue, as described in the program alignment proposal for the teaching option. However, the department may explore the use of the university-wide REAL assessment program to assess learning outcomes for the Social Science Major Non-Teaching Option.
SACS Coverage: While HIST 101 and 102 are technically electives, students must take one or the other. Both are SACS Approvable General Education courses. Students in this major will be guaranteed to take three credit hours of SACS Humanities, as well as at least twenty-one total credit hours of SACS-approved General Education. REAL Area Coverage: Students must take 101 or 102, plus any two 3xx coded EU and/or GL. Courses coded EU or GL are also coded REAL E. Thus, students get nine hours of E, with at least three hours at 300 level.

A Area: Learning Goal: To examine the context and interactions of culture(s) and/or behavior(s).
Learning Outcome 1: Students describe behaviors, beliefs, cultures, social institutions, and/or environments.	Currently, the Department of History employs a program assessment that covers both the teaching and non-teaching options of the Social Science Major. This may continue, as described in the program alignment proposal for the teaching option. However, the department may explore the use of the university-wide REAL assessment program to assess learning outcomes for the Social Science Major Non-Teaching Option.
Learning Outcome 2: Students analyze the interactions of behaviors, beliefs, cultures, social institutions, and/or environments.	Currently, the Department of History employs a program assessment that covers both the teaching and non-teaching options of the Social Science Major. This may continue, as described in the program alignment proposal for the teaching option. However, the department may explore the use of the university-wide REAL assessment program to assess learning outcomes for the Social Science Major Non-Teaching Option.
SACS Coverage: Both HIST 111 and HIST 112 are SACS General Education approvable, which guarantees that students in this major will have six hours of SACS-approved general education social science, plus twenty-one hours of SACS general education in total. REAL Area Coverage: Students must take 111 and 112, plus at least one 300-level course from a list of US-coded courses. Thus, students in this major get at least nine hours of REAL A courses, with at least three of those hours at 300 level.

Assessment of Learning Outcome 1 will be completed as part of the same process. Portfolios include examples of formal written coursework, as well as a reflective essay. Based on learning outcome one of each HIST 3xx course, students “practice thinking critically and analytically about historical issues”; based on learning outcome four of each HIST 3xx course, students “acquire a broader knowledge and deeper understanding of key issues, themes, personalities, and events.” Meeting these outcomes requires students to be able to describe behaviors and beliefs. Thus, the Assessment Coordinator’s committee will be able to the artifacts referenced above to assess how well students describe behaviors and beliefs.
Learning Outcome 2: Students analyze the interactions of behaviors, beliefs, cultures, social institutions, and/or environments.	Assessment of programmatic learning outcomes for the Social Science Teaching Option Major are based on a portfolio and interview. Assessment of Learning Outcome 1 will be completed as part of the same process. Portfolios include examples of formal written coursework, as well as a reflective essay. Based on learning outcome three of each HIST 3xx course, students “apply their critical thinking, research, and compositional skills to the creation and presentation of thesis driven essays that discuss, for example, historical social, economic, political, and/or cultural developments and that address issues such as the causes and consequences of historical change and continuity.” Based on learning outcome two of each HIST 3xx course, the skills that students apply include the ability to “analyze . . . evidence.” Meeting these outcomes requires students to be able to analyze interactions of behaviors and beliefs. Thus, the Assessment Coordinator’s committee will be able to use the artifacts referenced above to assess how well students analyze interactions of behaviors and beliefs.

A Area:
Learning Goal: To examine the context and interactions of culture(s) and/or behavior(s).
Learning Outcome 1: Students describe behaviors, beliefs, cultures, social institutions, and/or environments.	Currently, the Department of History employs a program assessment that covers both the teaching and non-teaching options of the Social Science Major. This may continue, as described in the program alignment proposal for the teaching option. However, the department may explore the use of the university-wide REAL assessment program to assess learning outcomes for the Social Science Major Non-Teaching Option.
Learning Outcome 2: Students analyze the interactions of behaviors, beliefs, cultures, social institutions, and/or environments.	Currently, the Department of History employs a program assessment that covers both the teaching and non-teaching options of the Social Science Major. This may continue, as described in the program alignment proposal for the teaching option. However, the department may explore the use of the university-wide REAL assessment program to assess learning outcomes for the Social Science Major Non-Teaching Option.
SACS Coverage: Both HIST 111 and HIST 112 are SACS General Education approvable, which guarantees that students in this major will have six hours of SACS-approved general education social science, plus twenty-one hours of SACS general education in total.
REAL Area Coverage: Students must take 111 and 112, plus at least one 300-level course from a list of US-coded courses. Thus, students in this major get at least nine hours of REAL A courses, with at least three of those hours at 300 level.
