

MISSION STATEMENT

The Master's program in Clinical Psychology seeks to provide a strong theoretical and applied foundation for those wishing to work in the field of mental health. The ultimate goal is for our graduates to be competent in the assessment and counseling of individuals experiencing mental health conflicts, be critical consumers of mental health research, and be life-long learners. Such a foundation will allow our graduates to practice both in a wide range of work settings and areas of competence, as well as prepare students for possible future graduate training. Our didactic and experiential coursework is guided by the fundamental ethical principles of respect, fidelity, and justice toward those we serve.
